Moore Stephens to collate next EITI reports

Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI) reports for the year 2006 will be collated by Moore Stephens Azerbaijan Limited following the decision of the Selection Group, which was established in accordance with the Memorandum of Understanding signed to implement EITI in Azerbaijan between the governmental Committee on EITI, foreign and local extractive industry (oil and gas) companies and the NGOs' Coalition for Increasing Transparency in Extractive Industries. Tender has been announced by bp, as the foreign and local companies are to pay audit company's fees for collation of the next (sixth) cycle reports as per MOU.

The Selection Group assessed the financial and technical proposals of the bidders on May 21, 2007. Five internationally recognized audit companies- Deloitte, PriceWaterHouseCoopers, Ernst & Young, Moore Stephens and KPMG - operating in the Republic of Azerbaijan were invited to bid.

Moore Stephens was founded in London in 1907. Working in 93 countries worldwide the Moore Stephens International network is now one of the leading international accounting and consulting networks.

'Rhetoric exceeds action', says Transparency International report on G8 promises

Report calls for G8 to report on their progress in fighting corruption in 2008

Berlin, 5 June 2007 - Transparency International's (TI) 'G8 Progress Report'

[http://www.transparency.org/publications/publications/g8_progress_report], issued today in Berlin, a day ahead of the Group of Eight (G8) Summit in Germany, concludes that although many laudable commitments have been made towards fighting corruption and improving governance, follow-through on them has been meagre.

The report, compiled by Transparency International chapters in G8 countries, looks at several different issues, from cracking down on bribery abroad by G8-based companies, to better tracking of illicit funds in the global financial system, and the strengthening of a global legal framework against corruption.

The report also calls on the G8 provide a rigorous self-assessment on implementing their past pledges when they convene in 2008 in Japan.

"We see that the governments of the G8 are well aware of what is needed in the fight against corruption," said Huguette Labelle, TI's Chair. "They use the right language. But four and five years down the road, political will has not been sufficient to turn these commitments into action. We would not deny that criminalising foreign bribery or ratifying a global anti-corruption convention are easy tasks, but they are achievable, and the resources are there."

Enforcing Anti-Bribery Laws: Drawing from an in-depth report to be issued in July, the G8 Progress Report concludes that Canada, Japan and the UK are failing to enforce the OECD Anti-Bribery Convention, undermining their credibility in calling for better governance in the developing world. Foreign bribery will continue to undermine reform in developing countries unless all parties vigorously enforce their laws.

Leveraging Export Credit Agency Financing to Reduce Corruption: The Report concludes that each of the G8 export credit agencies (ECAs) except for the EXIM Bank of Russia appear to have taken some steps to encourage customers to comply with anti-bribery laws; however, all G8 ECAs must do more to turn commitments into action.

Ratifying and Implementing the UN Convention against Corruption: The Report calls on Canada, Germany, Italy and Japan to ratify the UN Convention immediately. It also calls on all G8 countries to move forward with full implementation and monitoring of commitments. The UN Convention establishes global benchmarks on anti-corruption legislation and commits parties to mutual legal assistance when investigating corruption.

Promoting Revenue Transparency through the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative: The Report calls on those G8 countries with substantial energy resources -- Canada, Russia, the UK and the US -- to implement the EITI in their own countries. It also calls on Italy, Japan and Russia to join the ranks of G8 countries that give financial support to the EITI. In addition, it calls on all G8 countries to provide financial support and safeguards for civil society organisations engaged in advocating for transparency, and monitoring implementation and progress.

Looking to the Future: Increase Transparency of Financial Institutions and Markets: The Report calls for prompt implementation of G8 commitments to prevent the misuse of financial markets and institutions for illicit purposes by increasing transparency and strengthening oversight.

The bottom line, the report concludes, is that, "As the world's leading economies, G8 countries have a special responsibility to promote accountability, starting at home." Commenting on the relevance of these findings to this year's summit, Cobus de Swardt, TI's Managing Director, noted, "Corruption control and better governance are inextricable from the overarching goal of this year's summit, which is 'Growth and Responsibility'. Whether it is regulating hedge funds, stemming climate change, or ensuring that no further generation in Africa must live in abject poverty, governance and transparency form a golden thread. It is time for the G8 to turn its promises into action"

Cost of South Caucasus Gas Main Surpasses Expenditure Target

Baku-Supsa requires 22.5 million for maintenance

In the first quarter of 2007, the factual amount of capital investment in the South Caucasus Gas Pipeline (SCGP) went beyond the forecast. Just like that, a total of 12 million U.S. dollars was been spent in capital expenditure on the implementation of the project since January through March, while some 41 million U.S. dollars had been budgeted for the entire 2007. Mr Bill Schrader, the president of BP Azerbaijan, said that the overrun was associated with the completion of certain components of the testing work outstanding since the end of last year.

Meanwhile, a large-scale overhaul continues on the Baku-Supsa Western Route Export Pipeline (WREP) which has been standing inoperative since October 2007. The corresponding repair programme also includes a component that provides for the shifting of the pipeline route for a distance of a kilometre alongside the Georgian sector. In addition to six million U.S. dollars which have been spent on taking security measures in a landslide area, it is planned to outlay 22.5 million U.S. dollars on pipeline upgrade in 2006 to 2007. The company management hasn't provided any elaboration on when the pipeline will be re-commissioned, but has emphasized that the issue depends on the pace of development of the repair work.

Referring to an interview which The London Daily Mail had made with Les Abrahams, an ex representative of BP, concerning the company's hand in the overthrow of the government of the Azerbaijan Popular Front movement and bribing the authorities in Azerbaijan in return for having favourable terms in the Contract of the Century, Mr Schrader said that BP was "not a political organisation" and worked in the framework of the legislation of the countries in which it had operations. According to him, BP has not been engaged in any political event that had occurred in Azerbaijan; hereby the interview was a fabricated fantasy. As to the claim of bribing the Government of Azerbaijan in the amount of 30 million U.S. dollars, Mr Schrader said that the company had never had an idea of greasing anybody's palm, and there hadn't been made any unofficial payment to the Government of Azerbaijan in addition to the bonuses which had been transferred and made public in the framework of the production-sharing agreement [on the development of the Azeri – Chirag – (deepwater) Gunashli oil fields].

EITI Coalition makes arrangements for university meetings

Transparency initiative and the effective management of petrodollars are on agenda for teaching staff and students

The Coalition Increasing Transparency in Extractive Industries on May 17th 2007 held a round table at Azerbaijan State Economic University. The conference was organised in the framework of the Coalition's annual action plan. Participating in the meeting were Mr Azar Mehdiyev, PhD in Economics, a member of the ITEI Coalition and the editor-in-chief of the Ekspert (expert) journal, Mr Ali Hajiyev, the dean of the university department on the Economics of Industries and Services, Mr Ehtiram Ali, a person in charge of organisation of round tables at universities in Baku and regions, representatives of the teaching staff, students, and members of the Coalition.

Opening the meeting, Mr Ali Hajiyev, the dean of the university department on the Economics of Industries and Services, laid the emphasis on the significance of the gathering, the importance of increasing transparency in the use of incomes from extractive industries and the relevance of the corresponding education of students on these issues.

Mr Ehtiram Ali informed the audience that the effect of the activity of the Coalition as well as the future of the country depend very much on securing transparency in the management of petrodollars.

For his part, Mr Azar Mehdiyev addressed the meeting with the report on oil incomes and the effective use of them. He provided in-depth answers to a number of questions he had raised in his presentation, thereby opening a way to broad discussions over the issues of interest as well as the topics of concern.

Summarising the gathering Mr Ali Hajiyev noted the necessity of involvement of the teaching staff and students in the strengthening of transparency in extractive industries and the requirement for having similar meetings in the future. He also thanked the attendees, including distinguished guests, for their participation in the round table.

The topic raised broad discussions, with Mr Husseinli providing in-depth answers to the corresponding questions. At the end he thanked the participants and guests for active involvement in discussions, hereby announcing that the meeting had finished its work.
- A round table took place at the Ganja Agricultural Academy on June 30th 2007 as part of the 2007 action plan of the coalition Increasing Transparency in Extractive Industries. Participating in the gathering were members of the Board of the ITEI Coalition – Mr Sabit Baghirov and Mr Oqtay Gulaliyev; the co-ordinator for Ganja Regional Branch of the ITEI Coalition, Mr Aslan Valiyev; member of the Board of the Ganja Regional Branch, Mr Irshad Abbasov; lecturer at Ganja State University, Ms Maleika Abbaszada; the chairman of the Children’s Fund, Mr Rovshan Novruzov; the chairman of the Ganja Branch of the Union of Merchants and Manufacturers, Mr Jabrail Mammadov; the chairman of the Ganja Regional Branch of the For the Sake of Civil Society NGO, Mr Vaqif Imanov; journalist from Baki Xabar (Baku news) newspaper, Mr Ruslan Khalill; a person in charge of organisation of round tables at universities in Baku and regions, Mr Ehtiram Ali; and members of the teaching staff and representatives from students’ circles at the university.

Mr Irshad Abbasov, a member of the Board of the Ganja Regional Branch, officially opened the conference by briefing the audience of the importance of the meeting. For his part, Mr Aslan Valiyev, the co-ordinator for Ganja Regional Branch of the ITEI Coalition, made a short presentation on the significance of the International Transparency Initiative to the participants of the gathering. Then Mr Oqtay Gulaliyev gave a speech on large-scale and explicitly useful activities of the ITEI Coalition in the country, and invited the audience for active involvement in such kind of actions. Afterwards, Mr Sabit Baghirov, another member of the Board of the ITEI Coalition, made an in-depth presentation entitled Oil Factor and Relevant Earnings, Opportunities and Effects. He gave the audience an extensive insight into the existing international experience in the field of transparency and historical background on Azerbaijan’s joining to the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative, as well as on the status of the State Oil Fund of Azerbaijan (SOFAZ), the point of enhancing transparency in spending receipts from extractive industries, the factor of petrodollars and providing the public with access to the detailed information on the ways of use of petrodollars for various purposes, and ensuring the involvement of the population and civil society institutions in decision-making processes concerning petrodollars and the easy of use of them, and the establishment and exercise of civilian oversight of the generation and management of oil revenues. The topic raised broad discussions over possible scenarios for enhancing transparency in the use of petrodollars with the purpose of translating their potential into bettering the social status of the population. In this respect an emphasis was laid on the reinforcement of educational activities and the strengthening of the role of social organisations, including individuals in capacity of teachers and students. The corresponding questions were answered at length. It was proposed to make arrangements or such kind of educational meetings at other higher educational institutions in Ganja too. Summarizing the round table, Mr Irshad Abbasov noted the importance of the role of the teaching staff and students in the strengthening of transparency in extractive industries and the necessity to hold such kind of meetings in the future. So was the ending of the meeting.

NGOs in Kazakhstan want to benefit by Coalition’s experience

A meeting with experts in Kazakhstan’s EITI activities took place at the headquarters of the Increasing Transparency in Extractive Industries coalition of Azerbaijani NGOs on June 8th. Participating in the gathering were members of the Board of the Coalition, as well as Mr Anton Artemyev, a representative from the Soros Foundation in Kazakhstan, and Mr Malik Issabekov, a representative of the Kazakhstan’s NGO Coalition with an eye on EITI processes.

The meeting made the focus on discussions over the ways of fostering co-operation and exchange of experience between NGO coalitions of Azerbaijan and Kazakhstan. Noting remarkable achievements of Azerbaijan's NGOs in the implementation of EITI, establishment and development of relations between the Coalition, on the one side, and the public and mass media, on the other side, the guests from Kazakhstan stated their desire for benefiting from such experience. At their request, members of the Board of the Coalition – Mr Ingilab Ahmadov, Mr Sevgim Rahmanov, and Mr Qubad Ibadoglu, a co-ordinator for the alliance – provided in-depth information on the above-mentioned activities. In his answer to the question by Mr Nariman Aghayev, a member of the Board of the Coalition, Mr Anton Artemyev clarified that despite a number of state-owned Kazakh companies involved in the mining industry had signed to the memorandum concerning the implementation of EITI, as a matter of fact, this turned out to be a mere formality. According to him, NGOs in Kazakhstan sought to establish relations with those companies but failed to arrive at an appropriate format of working together.

After the discussions, there was reached an agreement on making considerable arrangements for yet expanding relations between the two groupings, joint measures aimed at making EITI-joined companies submit their corresponding reports on an individual basis, launching a regional web network, etc.

Participants of the meeting considered it necessary to include an option of extensive EITI info campaigns as a major component of joint activities in the future.

Coalition objects the composition of the Supervisory Board of the Oil Fund

The alliance claims dubious representation of civil society by parliament and Academy of Sciences

The coalition of civil society institutions Increasing Transparency in Extractive Industries on June 8th issued a statement on the newly arranged composition of the Supervisory Board of the State Oil Fund of the Azerbaijan Republic (SOFAZ). The announcement refers to the corresponding Presidential Decree of May 18th on the approval of the new composition of the SOFAZ Supervisory Board. In accordance with Article 5.4 of the SOFAZ Regulations, which were approved by the Presidential Decree #434 of December 29th, 2000, a representative(s) of civil society institutions must have a seat(s) on the Supervisory Board of the Fund. So the board must be composed of two members from Milli Maclis (parliament or legislative power), five members from the Government (executive power), a member from the Milli Bank (central bank), and a member from the National Academy of Sciences.

Considering it wrong to introduce representatives from Milli Maclis and the National Academy of Sciences on behalf of civil society institutions, the Coalition, as a party to the implementation of the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative in the field of petroleum and mining development in Azerbaijan, on February 7th 2007 applied in written to the President of the Azerbaijan for the purpose of representation in the Supervisory Board of the State Oil Fund. Unfortunately, there wasn't any response to the address which says: "Having the Coalition, which incorporates around 100 NGOs active within the scope of the mission to achieve transparency in extractive industries and the effective management of natural resources through active involvement of the civil society, left aside from the overall control over the management of the State Oil Fund lessens the public confidence in the use of oil revenues in the transparent way, thereby augmenting the risks associated with the effective management of public finance in general. This all concerns the coalition of civil society institutions Increasing Transparency in Extractive Industries.”

Referring to the Presidential Decree #511, of June 19th 2001, on making arrangements for the operation of the State Oil Fund of the Azerbaijan Republic, the Coalition considers appropriate the periodical release of the information on the activity of the Fund, including the revenue and expenditure balance, and the biannual statement of independent auditor’s conclusion of what the Government has received and the companies have paid [over the corresponding period]. However, the alliance also considers that all the measures mentioned above are not enough under the circumstances of an increase in the amount of petrodollars and growing expenditures. “The coalition of civil society institutions Increasing Transparency in Extractive Industries proposes to co-ordinate the budget of the State Oil Fund directly with the Azerbaijan Republic law on the budget systems, to consider the entire package of budget documents for the next year, including the budget of the Oil Fund, at the corresponding parliamentary hearings, to adopt a law on the management of oil incomes, in order to ensure the supervision by the legislature of the operation of the Fund, and to provide the Coalition, as a representative on behalf of civil society institutions, with a seat on the Supervisory Board of the Fund, in order to ensure civilian oversight of SOFAZ.”

EITI PROVES ITS WORTH AT A MAJOR GATHERING ON CASPIAN PETROLEUM DEVELOPMENT

The Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI) pervaded the agenda of the third session on the last working day of the 14th Caspian International Oil & Gas Conference, on June 7th.

Mr Yon Ramberg, the ambassador of Norway to Azerbaijan, opened the special session Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative: towards a global norm for revenue transparency. He made an emphasis on the crucial importance of EITI for oil- and gas-producing nations.

Speaking of Azerbaijan as a pioneer country that had joined the Initiative – first announced by UK Prime Minister, Mr Tony Blair – UK ambassador, Mr Laurie Bristow said of major achievements of the country in this field of activity. Appreciating the functioning of the EITI Coalition of NGOs as one of the success stories of Azerbaijan, the ambassador announced that the corresponding co-operation would be successfully carried out with civil society institutions. Mr Bristow said that the Government of Azerbaijan – together with companies and NGOs – has played a key role in transforming the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative into a global programme.

Mr Anita Utseth, Norway's deputy minister for oil and energy, noted that her country supported EITI, and highlighted the focal importance of the measures which were implemented in Azerbaijan in this field of activity.

Also during the first half of the session, different reports were delivered on the topic EITI: Lessons Learnt/Next Steps.

Mr Shahmar Movsumov, the executive director of the State Oil Fund of Azerbaijan (SOFAR) and the chairman of the State Commission on EITI, provided in-depth information about the policies and activities which the Government of Azerbaijan had conducted in the framework of the Initiative so far. Mr Movsumov accentuated the effective co-operation which was established and moved ahead with the involvement of the EITI Coalition of NGOs, and local and foreign oil companies.

Also, information was provided on the reports of local and foreign companies on EITI. Furthermore addressing the session on this topic were Mr Suleyman Qasimov, vice president for economic affairs at SOCAR, Mr Sverre Olden Mala, manager for government and public affairs at Statoil, and Ms Clare Bebbington, BP Azerbaijan vice president for communications and external relations.

Making a comprehensive presentation was Mr Sabit Baghirov, a member of the Board of the EITI Coalition of NGOs in Azerbaijan. Mr Baghirov said that the Coalition was established with the involvement of 32 civil society institutions and individual members, while that number rose to 107 in three years. The Coalition pursues four major objectives: civilian oversight of oil revenues, public awareness of this topic, development of civil society, and representation of the civil society in EITI. Stating the stance of the Coalition on EITI, Mr Baghirov noted that "despite EITI's coverage of a majority of items, on the other hand, some types of revenues are left beyond the framework of the Initiative," thereby making it possible for the "EITI to answer only a part of the questions which can be of interest for the public." Mr Baghirov forwarded four major proposals concerning oil revenues: necessity to adopt a new law on the management of oil revenues; necessity to have a civil society representative at the Supervisory Board of the Oil Fund (SOFAR); necessity to expand the coverage of EITI reporting templates; necessity to set up an accountability system for oil revenue expenditures.

Addressing the latter half of the session EITI: Regional Perspectives were Mr Jonas Moberg, the head of EITI Secretariat, Mr David Narmania from the Georgian NGO Coalition Transparency of Public Finance, Ms Anara

Dautalieva, a representative from EITI Kyrgyzstan, and Mr Malik Issabekov, a representative from EITI Kazakhstan. Noting the results of the work in this field of activity in their countries, the reporters also referred to the corresponding crucial successes of Azerbaijan and highlighted the progress of the EITI Coalition of NGOs in making the statement on the official reports on the implementation of EITI.

Despite it was the 14th Caspian International Oil & Gas Conference, hosted in Baku, for the first time there were held consultations on EITI topics.

EITI Azerbaijan NGO Coalition receives Media Award

The group has become notable for active co-operation with the media

The Zardabi Media Centre has announced the results of the multi-profile poll which it had conducted in 2006. The corresponding event, dedicated to the presentation of the results, took place at the Hyatt Regency Hotel on May 30th, with participation of representatives from governmental circles, ministry officials, heads of international organizations, MPs, members of the Press Council, media representatives, business and NGO circles, etc.

The winners have been selected among the nominees for 7 categories. The Coalition Increasing Transparency in Extractive Industry was among the winners as well. The group has distinguished itself among NGOs and NGO unions in the field of active co-operation with the media.

A diploma of distinction and the corresponding award for “active co-operation with the media in 2006” were presented to Mr Oqtay Gulaliyev, a member of the Coalition Board, who was attending the event on behalf of the group.

Addressing the gathering, Mr Gulaliyev extended deep thanks on behalf of the Coalition to the people who organized and conducted the poll, including the Zardabi Media Centre. Touching upon the objectives of the Coalition, Mr Gulaliyev highlighted the importance of active involvement of civil society in the transparent use of the revenues from the development of natural resources.

In-depth information on the event was provided at a meeting of the Board of the Coalition on June 8th, with the award being displayed at the office of the alliance.

Inhabitants of Mingachevir worry about the fortune of petrodollars

A round table – the next in turn in the framework of the coalition’s integrated project entitled Campaigning for the Awareness of Citizens and Increase of the Interest for the Effective Use of Oil Revenues – took place in Mingachevir, a major town in the central part of the country, on June 10th.

Mr Hamid Khalilov, the head of the Centre for Monitoring of and Education on Socioeconomic Rights, addressed the audience on the oil incomes to be earned by Azerbaijan, and the management of the assets of the Oil Fund. The opening speech was given by Mr Asgar Ahmad, the head of the Democratic Values Protection Fund, who provided an insight into the topic and informed participants of the significance of the event, as well as EITI process itself, history of establishment and operation of the coalition Increasing Transparency in Extractive Industries. The remaining part of the meeting was devoted to the Q&A session.

According to Mr Asgar Ahmad, also one of the project co-ordinators, the audience was mainly interested in the following topics: ways of management of oil incomes so that they will benefit the well-being of future generations; the ongoing situation with crude oil production at SOCAR; spending priorities with respect to the accumulations at the State Oil Fund; reasons for Azerbaijan’s small shareholding interest in major production-sharing agreements; the leverages which the coalition ITEI can exert over the Government of Azerbaijan on the effective use of oil incomes; assessment of whether petrodollars are used to the purpose or misused; the extent to which the threat of Dutch disease become realistic to Azerbaijan; the possible role of petrodollars in the lives of young people. The topics raised broad discussions.

Participating in the event were more than 30 activists from local NGOs, as well as teachers’, municipality and students’ circles in Mingachevir.

Supervisory Board of the Oil Fund convenes a meeting

The Supervisory Board of the State Oil Fund held its regular meeting on June 13th. According to the PR department of the Fund, Prime Minister Artur Rasizada, the chairman of the Supervisory Board of the State oil Fund, presided at the meeting.

Discussed at the meeting were the annual report on the activities of the Fund as of 2006, the results of the audit of financial performance, and upcoming changes in the 2007 budget. Following the corresponding presentation of the 2006 annual report and the results of independent audit, which was carried out by Ernst & Young, by the executive director of the State Oil Fund, the Supervisory Board considered each of the documents acceptable and voted in favour of submitting the third paper – draft form of the execution of the 2006 budget – for consideration to the president of the country.

Meanwhile, accepting amendments to the 2007 budget of the Fund, the Board decided to submit the corresponding changes for approval to the president. Besides that, Mr Artur Rasizada was re-elected to the post of the chairman of the Supervisory Board.

PWYP Applauds Obasanjo For Signing NEITI Bill

May 31st, 2007

By Bassey Udo and Charles Okonji, Lagos

Publish-What-You-Pay Nigeria (PWYP), one of the leading non-governmental organisations (NGOs) that championed the cause for the passage of the Nigeria Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (NEITI) Act, has commended the immediate past President, Chief Olusegun Obasanjo, for signing the bill into law shortly before he left office last Tuesday.

National Coordinator of the group, David Ugolor, who issued the commendation, assured that Civil Society Groups in the country would continue to work with government and all its agencies to ensure that the NEITI Law meets the principles and criteria of the global Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI).

Obasanjo, while appending his signature to the document recently passed into law by the National Assembly, noted that he was delighted to carry out the exercise to leave a lasting legacy of revenue transparency in Nigeria's oil and gas as well as solid minerals industries.

Ugolor "We see the accent by Chief Olusegun Obasanjo formally bringing NEITI Act into being as a watershed in the annals of revenue transparency in Nigeria | the nation's oil and gas as well as solid minerals industries.

"We are particularly pleased that he had to sign it shortly before leaving office so that the new President, Umar Yar'Adua, will have a legal platform to continue the NEITI. We are glad that the new President, during his electioneering, expressed commitment to continue the process. In due time, we will follow up on the commitment," he added.

PWYP Campaign urged that with the NEITI Law in place, the process of nominating stakeholders into the National Stakeholder Working Group NSWG, prior to the approval of National Assembly must provide opportunity for all stakeholders to self-nominate their representatives in line with the EITI principles and criteria.

The Coordinator, Gender and Development Action (GADA), Tijah Bolton, equally called on Yar'Adua to immediately to initiate steps to implement the NEITI Law, as it would signal the readiness of his administration to move quickly to entrench a regime of transparency and accountability in the extractive sector, particularly in the oil and gas industry, which contributes over 94 per cent of the country's foreign exchange.

PWYP further expressed the hope that the NEITI Act would provide the enabling environment for the NEITI to carry out its proposed value-for-money audit aimed at ensuring that the financial accounting pertaining to Joint Ventures (JVs) and Production Sharing Contracts (PSCs) fairly represents the actual costs incurred in exploring, extracting, and transporting oil, among other such aspects of oil production in Nigeria and also see how such costs associated with oil production in Nigeria are reasonably consistent with the cost associated with comparable international operations.

OGUZ gathering discusses youth involvement in EITI

Two civil society institutions Healthy Development and Education (SIMIB) and Youth Democrats Reformists (DIMIB) on June 6th 2007 held a seminar with young people in Oguz district, as part of the united project Involvement of Young People in EITI Processes implemented by the coalition Increasing Transparency in Extractive Industries.

During the seminar, participants were given portable calendars, notebooks and pens bearing the logos of the ITEI coalition, SIMIB and DIGIB organizations. Also in the course of the event, the walls of the seminar room were hung on with writing pads, as well as instructional sheets, bearing the logos of the ITEI coalition, SIMIB and DIGIB, with information about revenues and expenditures of the State Oil Fund of Azerbaijan (SOFAZ). All appliances were prepared by the ITEI coalition. The topics of discussion included preconditions for and history of establishment of SOFAZ, preconditions for the setting up of the ITEI coalition, as well as the information about the mission, activities and history of the alliance (speaker Mr Matlab Abbasov), sources of receipts for and the projects funded through the Oil Fund (speaker Mr Rasim Abutalibov).

In implementing the seminar, the Ministry of Youth and Sports and the executive power of Oguz district provided the organizational support, with information support given on behalf of the State Oil Fund of the Azerbaijan Republic (SOFAZ).

Representative from EITI coalition takes part in a conference in Indonesia

Mr Qubad Ibadoglu, the co-ordinator for the board of the coalition of civil society institutions Increasing Transparency in Extractive Industries, visited Jakarta, Indonesia, June 12th through 14th 2007, at the invitation of Transparency international Indonesia. The main objective of the visit was to make a presentation on the implementation of EITI in Azerbaijan and the formation of the ITEI coalition at a special gathering for local NGOs supporting the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative.

Prior to his speech, Mr Ibadoglu, on the first day of his visit, on June 12th, met with Mr David Browne, an advisor for the UK Department for International Development (DFID); the two sides held discussions over the forms of co-operation among the Government of Azerbaijan, industry circles and civil society institutions in the implementation of EITI, as well as their respective roles and responsibilities. The same day the conversation got a new lease of life, at the conference with participation of representatives from governmental and business circles. Mr David Browne made his presentation on the topic; after the corresponding comments by Mr Qubad Ibadoglu, the audience held discussions over the issues on agenda.

On the second day of the visit, on June 13th, Mr Qubad Ibadoglu acted in the capacity of the speaker at the seminar on prospects for the implementation of EITI in Indonesia.

The opening speech to seminar participants was given by Mr Todung Mulya Lubis, the chairman of the Supervisory Board of Transparency International Indonesia. Then Mr Frankie Simanjuntak, a researcher for Transparency International Indonesia, provided information on the Initiative in general. Subsequently, the audience heard the presentation by Mr Qubad Ibadoglu on Azerbaijan's experience in the EITI, thereby raising broad discussions over a number of questions.

The second session of the seminar was devoted to presentations on the results of the assessment of the provisions of the corresponding production-sharing agreements and the calculation of costs related to the implementation of those production-sharing agreements, and the study of the dynamics of petroleum prices.

The third part of the seminar set the audience discussing the topics of EITI implementation on a regional scale, with the focus made on iron ore operations in the southern part of Kalimantan and crude oil production at Jepu.

A press conference summed up the work of the seminar.

Coalition takes a seat on Strategic Advisory Group for Publish What You Pay

7. North America – 2 people.

The composition of the Group has been formed for a two-year office until the next assembly of the PWYP Coalition.

Barda meeting focuses on youth involvement in EITI

Two civil society institutions Healthy Development and Education (SIMIB) and Youth Democrats Reformists (DIMIB) held a round table in Barda, a town in the central part of Azerbaijan, on June 16th 2007, in the framework of the Youth Involvement in EITI Processes project of the coalition Increasing Transparency in Extractive Industries. All 22 participants of the gathering were provided with proceedings from an international conference entitled Experience of Pilot Countries, as well as with portable calendars, notebooks and pens bearing the logos of the ITEI coalition, SIMIB and DIGIB organizations. Also in the course of the event, the walls of the seminar room were hung on with writing pads, as well as instructional sheets, bearing the logos of the ITEI coalition, SIMIB and DIGIB, with information about revenues and expenditures of the State Oil Fund of Azerbaijan (SOFAZ).

Opening the round table, project manager Mr A. Mikayilov informed the audience of the goal, objectives and topicality of the project as well as the organisations implementing it (EITI, SIMIB, and DIGIB).

Then the floor was given to Mr Anar Khalilov, the chairman of SIMIB. The presentation by Mr Khalilov had in-depth coverage of the role of petrodollars in the ongoing socioeconomic situation in Azerbaijan.

After that it was the turn of Mr Matlab Abbasov, the chairman of SIMIB's Law Studies Centre and lecturer at Odlar Yurdu University, to provide extensive information to the participants on the reasons for and historical background to the establishment and, afterwards, management of the State Oil Fund of the Azerbaijan Republic (SOFAZ), as well as necessary prerequisites for the foundation of the ITEI coalition, its mission, activities and history. An expert in law, Mr Matlab Abbasov also touched upon at length the benefits of civilian oversight of EITI developments.

Finally, Mr Rasim Abutalibov, the head of SIMIB's section of economics and lecturer at Kavkaz University, made a comprehensive presentation on the sources of receipts to SOFAZ and areas of allocation of the proceeds out of the accounts of the institution, including the projects that were funded by the Fund.

The presentations raised many questions which were answered by speakers.

In implementing the round table, the Ministry of Youth and Sports provided the organizational support, with information support given on behalf of the State Oil Fund of the Azerbaijan Republic (SOFAZ).

Radio debates focus on oil revenues

A regular radio broadcast on the topic Oil Revenues and Government Spending, as part of the series of radio debates on oil revenues and the effective use of them, has been aired in the framework of the corresponding united project of the coalition. Programme guests, Mr Azar Mehdiyev, the editor-in-chief of Ekspert journal, and Mr Cumsud Nuriyev, a former MP, touched upon the impact of petrodollars on the state budget, the effect of such influence on living conditions of the population, as well as the ways of use of oil incomes for the development of education and health sectors, etc.

Meanwhile, a radio dialogue on Oil Revenues and Economic Development has been organized on Public Radio's Diqqat Markazinda (in the spotlight) programme. The corresponding discussions, entitled Oil Revenues and Economic Development, have been sent out on the Public Radio in the framework of the united project's component known as Radio Dialogue on the Efficient Use of Oil Revenues.
